Lauren Peccoralo, MD, MPH is the Senior Associate Dean for Faculty Well-Being and Development and an Associate Professor in the Department of Medicine at the Icahn School of Medicine at Mount Sinai. Dr. Peccoralo graduated from Princeton University and earned her MD and MPH from ISMMS. She completed her internal medicine residency, chief residency and general medicine fellowship also at Mount Sinai. Dr. Peccoralo is a practicing primary care physician and educator of medical students, residents and faculty.

In her well-being role, Dr. Peccoralo has developed a robust Faculty Well-being Program and curriculum with a network of over 30 Faculty Well-being Champions across MSHS departments and sites. In addition, she has developed a leadership workshop for leaders to gain and practice skill in creating psychological safety in teams, coaching team members, and providing feedback and appreciation to their team members. In her faculty development role, she aims to address career development needs of junior faculty; create and collaborate on leadership development opportunities for faculty; enhance career advancement guidance; and create and promote mentorship programming. She publishes and presents nationally on primary care workforce development, integration of behavioral and physical healthcare, and health care worker well-being and mental health.
