New Survey Aims to Measure Physician Perspective on Physician-Assisted Suicide

Legislation on Physician-Assisted Suicide (PAS) became law in California on June 9, 2016 and in Oregon it has been legal since 1997. There are three (3) legislative bills that were introduced in the current NYS legislative session, with various definitions on death with dignity and the means for patients to request assistance. Click here to read the most recent bill. ACP has been opposed to PAS since 2000, with reaffirmations in 2004 and 2011. With discussion heightening around this topic at a national and state level, NYACP is seeking input from members on PAS.

We hope you will help us by taking the short 9-question survey here.

The Resolutions Process

The Chapter has developed a number of resources to assist members in the development of a resolution. A resolution is a proposal that asks the ACP or the NYACP to take a position and/or an action on a specific clinical, practice administration, or membership issue. A resolution consists of at least one directive ("Resolved clause") accompanied by supporting statements ("Whereas clauses").

When you visit the Resolutions section of our website you will learn how to:

- Share ideas with elected NYACP Governors or Council members;
- Submit information for discussion at the NYACP Health and Public Policy Committee; and/or
- Submit resolutions for review and action by the Chapter.

You may submit a new resolution at any time using our online submission link.

Medical Student Perspective: Tips on How to Be Healthy in Medical School

This article first appeared on ACP's Medical Student Page

We’re the twins, Stacey and Tracey! Being happy and healthy is one of our mottos, so we try to do what we can despite anything that comes our way.

How do you become happy and healthy? That’s what we’re here for! Tracey wrote an article published in the September 2014 IMPact newsletter edition titled “10 Tips on How to Be Happy in Medical School.” Feel free to read and share those tips. After getting lots of positive feedback from around the world, like the Caribbean, Egypt, Massachusetts, Missouri, and Texas, we decided to come up with more tips to help fellow medical students. Here are some ways you can be healthy in different aspects of medical school and beyond. Enjoy!

Be Emotionally Healthy

- Smile and be happy.
- Say “please” and “thank you.” Physicians, professors, patients, and interprofessional staff are all part of your learning, so it’s a nice gesture to let others know you are grateful for allowing them to be a part of your learning experience.

Reward yourself

- After an exam, a challenging week, or being on call, it’s nice to relax. Examples of how you can treat yourself include a massage, karaoke, laser tag, and sleep!
- Build a tough skin. Although we would like to think that everyone has some good in them that is not always the case. Some people may have a negative personality and may say hurtful or embarrassing things to you. Don’t let negative people get to you. Realize it may happen, mentally prepare yourself if it does happen, stay professional in the heat of the moment (easier said than done!), and don’t take it personally. If need be, talk about the incident with someone you trust.

Be Physically Healthy

- Munch healthily. Be aware of what you’re eating, and keep healthy snacks around. All that studying requires some good food to keep you going.
- Exercise. Although it is ideal to get about 30 minutes of exercise every day, not everyone can keep to that schedule. So integrate exercise into your day. Take the stairs. During breaks, brisk walk with a friend, do yoga, or do 5-minute exercises on YouTube. When you need to go to the bathroom, use the bathroom at least a floor above. If watching a video, stand up and walk in place. Some exercise is better than none. And, if you have time, definitely do some cardio, strength exercises, powerlifting (like us!), sports, etc., to keep your body moving.
- Sleep. A good night’s sleep helps in memory, energy, and quality of life.
